All fees (prices) or components of fees (e.g. reimbursement of expenses) mentioned in this List of Prices and Services are inclusive of any VAT incurred for the performance of the bank.

Even if it is not expressly mentioned below, the Bank is entitled, in accordance with the statutory provisions, to demand in addition to its own fee (price) reimbursement for expenses (e.g. postage, telephone costs, registration fees, brokerage and exchange fees, VAT charged by third parties, financial transaction tax or, if applicable, withholding tax). However, with regard to the VAT charged by third parties to the bank, this applies only to the extent that the bank is not entitled to deduct input tax. To the extent that the term 'free' is used in the List of Prices and Services below, this means that the bank does not charge its own fees (prices), but does not affect the power to charge for the above claim for reimbursement.

VII. Information on linked transactions

Where the Bank offers investment services in combination with other services or other products as part of a package or in such a form that execution of the other elements or formation of the other agreements is conditional upon performance of the investment services, the other services or the transactions involving the other products (linked transactions as defined by section 63 (9) German Securities Trading Act (WpHG)), the Bank must notify the client in accordance with the statutory provisions whether the individual elements can also be obtained separately from each other; if this is the case, the Bank must inform the client of the costs and fees for obtaining each element individually. The information is provided in this List of Prices and Services or in connection with the specific linked transaction.

Securities transactions – i.e. the buying and selling of securities in the form of commission-based or fixed-price transactions – require the client to have a bank account and a custody account at the Bank. The same applies to financial derivatives. If these are unsecuritised, the client requires only a bank account to be able to enter into them.

D Exchange rates for foreign currency transactions carried out for private clients and corporate customers

The following information do not apply for currency conversions in conjunction with card-based transactions; the therefor applicable regulations referring to payment cards can be found in Section B.

For customer transactions that require a conversion from or into a 'foreign currency', i.e. a currency other than euros ('foreign-currency transactions'), the Bank will settle the purchase or sale of the relevant foreign currency with the customer at the rates set out below, unless agreed otherwise between the Bank and the customer.

1. In general, all currency transactions are subject to the following rules:

- Debit transactions (e.g. outgoing payments in foreign currencies made from a customer account denominated in euros) are converted at the applicable selling rate of the foreign currency at the time ('HSBC currency bid rate'),
- Credit transactions (e.g. foreign-currency payments received in a customer account denominated in euros) are converted at the applicable buying rate of the foreign currency at the time ('HSBC currency offer rate')

(jointly referred to as the 'HSBC settlement rate').

The Bank converts all foreign-currencies transactions in its own name and for its own account.

2.a) HSBC settlement rates for foreign-currency transactions in connection with payment instructions are calculated by the Bank on every bank working day at 12.00 p.m. and 4.00 p.m. Düsseldorf local time.

The HSBC settlement rate is made up of two components:

- (1) The relevant reference exchange rate = WM/Reuters EUR Intraday Spot Mid¹⁹ for the settlement date in question, based on Düsseldorf local time.
- (2) A markup on the reference rate applied upon conversion for the customer from a foreign currency into euros, or a markdown from the reference rate applied upon conversion for the customer from euros into the relevant foreign currency.

The relevant reference exchange rate is determined and published by The World Markets Company PLC, Edinburgh, ('WMR').

The execution time of the purchase or sale of foreign currencies in the course of regular work processes depends on the time of receipt at the Bank of the instruction underlying the foreign currency transaction and on the relevant acceptance and execution periods of the Bank.

If no rate is published by WMR for a particular currency, the exchange rate identifiable in the international interbank currency market for this currency at the relevant time is used as the reference rate.

HSBC settlement rates are spot rates, i.e. the value date is two days after the execution date (T+2). These spot rates are adjusted for same-day settlement (T+0, i.e. value date = execution date) or next-day settlement (T+1, value date one day after the execution date) with swap points in the international currency market (interest-rate differential between the euro and the relevant foreign currency).

¹⁹ EUR = The euro is the base currency (quoted currency)

Spot = Value date two bank working days after the trade date.

Mid = Settlement at the middle rate. If both the bid and offered rate are known, the following applies: middle rate (mid) = (offered rate + bid rate) / 2; intraday = current rates for the day used to determine the reference rate (no closing rates)

b) For foreign currency transactions in freely convertible currencies relating to securities transactions, including event processing (e.g. when selling/buying securities or crediting dividend/coupon payments in foreign currencies, without a corresponding foreign-currency cash account for settlement), the Bank computes foreign-currency interbank bid and ask rates, which are in line with market conditions, repeatedly between 8.00 a.m. and 7.00 p.m. on every working day. The relevant foreign currency amounts are converted using these exchange rates plus a markup or markdown in line with prevailing bid and offer margins at the time. The most recently determined foreign-currency bid and ask rates available within the Bank's securities settlement systems at the time of the transaction processing applies. This time differs from the timing of the underlying securities transaction itself.

3. The price determination procedure is continually documented and regularly checked by the Bank's trading supervision department.

4. Current bid and ask margins on major currencies can be found on the 'Standard FX Margins' tab of the following website: <https://www.hsbc.de/en-gb/terms-and-prices>. Bid and ask margins for other currencies are available on request. The Bank may change the applicable bid and ask margins without notice. The new margins will be published on the Bank's website.

Within two hours of the publication of the relevant reference exchange rates by WMR, the Bank will publish the HSBC settlement rates and relevant reference exchange rates on the 'FX conversion for foreign payment transactions' tab of the following website: <http://www.hsbc.de/en-gb/terms-and-prices>.
